Claims 1-5 and 7-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over applicants' description of the prior art. Applicants' figs. 1 and 2 are labeled "prior art" and described on pages 1-3 of the specification. As described therein they illustrate a prior art evaporation apparatus and method including a rotating substrate, a heater for evaporation located under the substrate, and a metal wire-supplying device for supplying a vapor source material to the heater for evaporation and subsequent deposition on the rotating substrate. It can be seen from fig. 2 that a circular trace may be defined on the substrate in the manner described in claims 1 and 7. The claims require that there is a tangent to the circular trace at a point above the heater, and such a tangent exists for the prior art apparatus of fig. 2. The claims also require that the source supplying direction of the metal wire has a projection onto the plane of the substrate, and such a projection exists for the prior art apparatus of fig. 2. The claims as amended require the defined projection "overlaps" with the defined tangent. In the prior art apparatus of fig. 2, the defined projection does overlap the defined tangent. It is noted that the dictionary definition of "overlap" (see attached definition) is "1. to lap over; lie upon and extend beyond a part of (something or each other) 2. to extend over part of (a period of time, sphere of activity, etc); coincide in part (with)". In the prior art apparatus of fig. 2, the defined projection and the defined tangent will inherently "coincide in part". While the defined projection of fig. 2 does lie upon the defined tangent, it also extends beyond a part of the defined tangent. Therefore, it can properly be said that the defined projection in fig. 2 "overlaps" the defined tangent.

Claims 6 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over applicants' description of the prior art alone or in view of Hatwar (6,676,990). Applicants describe the prior art apparatus of figs. 1 and 2 as being used to deposit metal. In view of this description, it would have been prima facie obvious to use the prior art apparatus of figs. 1 and 2 to deposit a conventional metal coating such as aluminum or silver. Also, Hatwar teaches the use of a silver wire to deposit a silver coating by vacuum evaporation and it would have been obvious to use the prior art apparatus of applicants' figs. 1 and 2 to deposit this conventional prior coating material because Hatwar teaches that it is desirable do to so.
